Business Block Will Be Erected By Mrs. M. Goold

On the site of the old Carmel hotel, original hostelry of the village, which burned down about four years ago, Mrs. Mary A. Goold is soon to erect a new business building. This is the northeast corner of Ocean and San Carlos, where the Comstock unit house was displayed last summer.

Architect Guy Koepp is working on plans for the proposed structure, which will follow the Spanish style generally used in recent buildings in the business district. The lower floor will be arranged to accommodate two shops, and apartments will be built on the second floor. When the plans are completed, builders will be asked to bid on the job.

Howard Candidate on Utility Board

Frederick Paxson Howard is the only candidate in Carmel and vicinity for election to the board of five directors of the proposed public utility district on which the Monterey peninsula will vote at a special election June 4. Nominations closed June 30. Besides Mr. Howard these other candidates required sufficient sponsors' signatures to place their names on the ballot:

Ward 1, Pacific Grove: Sheldon Gilmer, B. A. Lee; Ward 2, Pacific Grove: William Fiddes, E. Cooke Smith; Ward 3, Monterey, Arthur J. Mason; Ward 4, Monterey, Arthur G. Metz. Ward 5, for which Mr. Howard is the candidate, includes Carmel, Pebble Beach, Point Lobos and Del Monte.

Members of the fact-finding committee which secured information upon which the special election was called were Howard, Metz and Fiddes, all candidates for the proposed board.

Sunset School Trustees Reelect Ewig Chairman

Sunset school trustees met Wednesday evening and reorganized for the coming year, with A. D. H. Hanke, the new member, taking office, E. H. Ewig re-elected chairman of the board, and Mrs. Helen Levinson, reelected clerk. Mr. Ewig urged Mr. Hanke to allow himself to be chosen chairman, but Mr. Hanke refused to consider this suggestion, expressing the feeling that he must become familiar with the duties of the board before consenting to take office. Reelection of the two officers who have served during the past year followed.

Beginning with June, monthly meetings of the board will be held the first Thursday of each month, at 7:30, instead of first Tuesdays as previously.

NEARLY 25 INCHES RAIN

Just short of the 25-inch mark is Carmel's season rainfall total, which gentle rains this week brought to 24.83 inches. So far 1935 is the wettest year since 1915, when the total was 26.21. Precipitation for Monday was .10; for Tuesday, .26. Showers early Thursday morning registered .04 of an inch.

Mayor Thoburn Pounds Gavel to No Avail In Windy Council Session

A LITTLE more of a mad hatters' tea party than usual was Wednesday evening's session of the village council. It was loud, but not very funny. Confusion frequently engulfed the proceedings, spectators carried on arguments for the benefit of other spectators without the formality of addressing the chair, several long-winded and not particularly pertinent discussions interrupted the proceedings, in which neither party seemed to know just what the other was talking about. With much first-of-the-month business to be dispatched, Mayor Thoburn used his gavel frequently and made some attempt to hasten proceedings. The actual business of the council took about twice as long as necessary.

Presumably because there is no police commissioner, it appears necessary to take up a volume of routine police matters on the floor of the council. The supposition is that with a duly appointed commissioner of police, many of these matters would be transacted between the chief and the commissioner without bringing them before the council, or which the commissioner would present.

One classical remark by Councilman Catlin deserved to be immortalized as the evening's theme song: "I don't clearly understand the recommendation of the chief of police but I think it should be adopted."

New Ordinance

As the result of a letter from Burney W. Adams, gas and electrical inspector, City Attorney Campbell was instructed to draw up a new ordinance covering inspection of building, gas and electrical installments, and creating a half-time position with compensation, for an inspector. Permission was granted to Sybil Antekeff and Sonya Noskowiak, who are taking over the photographic studio of Edward Weston, to continue to operate under his business license until it expired. They were commended for going through the formality of asking the council's permission, as the first who have complied with this technicality governing transfer of business.

Edward ("Daddy") Warner was appointed special officer at Devendorf Plaza, of which he is the keeper, in order that he may have authority to break up drinking parties in the park.

A resolution will be drawn setting time limits for parking on Ocean from Monte Verde to Junipero, and on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, at 1½ hours. Mayor Thoburn voted no on the motion calling for the resolution, as a protest to a restriction which he does not consider absolutely necessary.

Engineer Sends Bill

James Armstrong, engineer appointed by the utility district fact-finding commission to prepare data for the tri-city water rate case before the railroad commission, has billed the three cities for $400 for his services. Carmel's share of this had been decided upon as $115. When the matter of passing the warrant came up before the council, City Attorney Campbell stated his belief that the payment should not be made until a copy of the engineer's report was turned over to the city.

"I saw Mr. Armstrong in Palo Alto," said the city attorney, "and asked him about the report. He said that he had been instructed to prepare one copy only and turn it over to Frederick Paxson Howard" (of the

Robinson Jeffers Honored By College From Which He Graduated 30 Years Ago

OCCIDENTAL College in Los Angeles is commemorating the thirtieth anniversary of the graduation of one of its most distinguished alumni, Robinson Jeffers, the Carmel poet of world renown. He was honored on Founders' Day, and an exhibition of more than 50 items of Jeffersiana, picturing the evolution of the poet's genius, was held in the college library during April.

Moving spirit in arranging the display was Lawrence Clark Powell, a younger Occidental graduate, who has done much to familiarize readers of Jeffers' poems with the personality behind them. He is the author of the biography, "Robinson Jeffers, the Man and His Work," published last year.

In the March number of "The Occidental Alumnus," Powell writes as follows of Jeffers' scholastic career:

Brilliant Student

"Those who went to school with 'Jeff' knew him as an unusually brilliant, all-around student, devoted equally to books and sports. He also edited The Aurora and The Occidental, and contributed verse to both. He was only 18 when he took his B. A. In spite of his normal interest in campus activities, Jeffers friends were struck by the fact that he seemed to live largely within himself. His early verse shows proficient craftsmanship, a thorough classical and religious training, and a love of nature—but the fire of genius does not seem even to smoulder there. Jeffers' talent was slow to mature.

"His father was a scholar of languages, an eminent divine, a man of travels, and (best of all) a tolerant parent. His mother, too, was highly cultured, and an accomplished musician. The boy was taken early to Europe, from his natal home in Pittsburg, where his early years were spent largely in school in Switzerland. In summertime his father would take him on walking-tours in the Alps. His teachers called him 'the little Spartan.' At 16, the year he entered Occidental, he won a 'Youth's Companion' prize with a poem called 'The Condor.'"

To Academic Fields

After finshing at Occidental Jeffers browsed in other academic fields, including University of Southern California and University of Zurich. One year he won the heavyweight wrestling championship at USC; he was deeply interested in astronomy. Rounding out a varied and interesting personality, he was incidentally equipped for several possible careers, which he had the courage to eschew because he was not really deeply interested in anything except poetry.

In 1913, after receiving a small legacy, Jeffers married Una Call Kuster and came to Carmel to live, where in time he built his famed house and tower of granite, where the poet, his wife and their stalwart twin sons now live, in the midst of a rapidly growing forest of 2000 trees, which the poet planted himself. He continued to write poetry, and since the publication of "Tamar and other Poems" he has been recognized as one of America's great poets.

Resignation of Mrs. Montague Rejected By Art Association

At a meeting of the board of directors of Carmel Art Association held Wednesday afternoon, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved: That the board of directors of Carmel Art Association has given a vote of confidence in Mrs. Nellie Montague and refuses to accept her resignation as curator."

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

— Appreciated —

Artists' Board Upholds Curator

Mrs. Nellie Montague tendered her resignation as curator of Carmel Art Gallery Wednesday afternoon, a post which she has held since the opening of the present gallery in January, 1934. The board refused to accept her resignation and it is probable that she will continue in the post. Mrs. Montague's action was inspired by the fact that two members of the board of directors are also members of the SERA art project committee, and as the committee failed to express themselves as opposed to her recent discharge as supervisor of the art project, she felt that she might also be not acceptable to them in the gallery position.

To clear the art project committee of all responsibility in the matter of Mrs. Montague's discharge from the SERA post, Frederick R. Bechdolt, county SERA director, made the following voluntary statement to The Pine Cone Wednesday evening:

"No member of the art project committee had anything to do with my action in discharging Mrs. Montague as supervisor of the art project. It was done entirely on my own volition. The discharge was sent through the regular channels to the SERA headquarters in San Francisco and approved by them."

The three members of the art project committee are Armin Hansen, also president of the Carmel Art Association; E. Charlton Fortune, member of the board, and Francis McComas.

— Successor —

Burton Boundey Art Supervisor

Burton Boundey has been appointed supervisor of the Monterey Peninsula SERA art project, according to Frederick Bechdolt, county SERA director. Boundey, who succeeds Mrs. Nellie Montague in this position, is a well-known Monterey artist, painter chiefly of landscapes and noted for his warm and naturalistic treatment of California hills, trees and skies. He has already taken over his new duties.

Carmel's Poet Is Numbered Among Galaxy of Great

By THELMA B. MILLER

THE Pine Cone is proud to note whatever honors come to one of the dozen Carmelites who have made this village famous by living in it. Robinson Jeffers, while living and writing in Carmel, has emerged to rank with the few great living poets. So many poets sing their songs to a heedless world; live unhonored, die unsung, that it is a great satisfaction to friends of Robinson Jeffers that he has lived to see his message heeded, his name numbered among the galaxy of today's eminent writers.

The fact that 30 years ago Robinson Jeffers was a student at Occidental College is a cause of pride to the college; so much so that it is calling special attention to that remote phase of his career.

Tor House, the beautiful stone dwelling on Carmel Point, is today the object of pilgrimages by appreciative Jeffers readers. Jeffers himself is scarcely a familiar figure in the village. When he does appear, he is well defended by the ferocious countenance of Haig, the white pit-bull, who hides a sentimental interior behind the formidable mask with which Nature endowed him.

Jeffers is less a recluse, which many Carmelites believe him to be, than a shy person who lives the kind of a life he loves best. He has little small-talk; it is not easy for him to chat casually with all comers. He is not like other people, and he has the courage not to try to be. The poems he has written could not have issued from the average man. Just as they are not easy or casual fare, for the average reader, so is the poet hard to circumscribe within the limits of average personality.

By those who know him well,—well enough to call him "Robin," which is Una Jeffers' name for him—Jeffers is regarded with a deep personal affection transcending all recognition of his gifts. He is sincere, as only shy people are, who have no need of building up an amiable artificialty. His understanding of the deeper values of life are not confined only to writing about them; he lives them as well. He likes to talk, when he does talk, of simple things; trees, and animals, and riding trails in the back country. He is quick to understand, sympathetic with another's fumblings to express things close to the heart and not easy to express.

If there is bitterness in Robinson Jeffers' poetry it is not the bitterness of dour, disillusioned man. It is just such bitterness as may be part of a salt cold wind, the Pacific ocean which he loves so well; the inevitable rigour of nature, which wise men accept and adapt themselves to.

TO ROBINSON JEFFERS

Savouring the bitter roots of life
The treachery of the mind to its slave
The stark cruel march of nature against itself
You have found sweetness in the very bite
The sharp cold after-taste
The dull opiate pain they leave.

This you have taught us:
We may turn not from the odious drug
Nor spit it out
Nor even wash it down with some false-flavored draught.
Accept, you say,
Suffering—the only remedy for pain,
Death,—the sovereign remedy for life.

JAKE ZEITLIN.

Tor House, Carmel, California,
March 22, 1935.

Dear Jake Zeitlin:

Thank you very much for the poem "To R. J." It is beautifully done, and expresses what I suppose is a main tendency in my verses. Sometimes I wish they were not occupied quite so much with it, for though the feeling is true it is less than the whole truth. When I think, I know that pleasure and pain counterbalance each other pretty accurately on the average, but when I write verses I am just the opposite apparently of that delightful fellow Ford Madox Ford writes about, who "had tried so hard to be a philosopher, but cheerfulness would come creeping in." However, our ends tend to be rather sad, and we bawl at birth: I suppose my verses are thinking of the ends of life, and with what sort of hard faces to meet them, rather than the way-stations—at which I wish you and me many pleasant pauses.

Sincerely,
ROBINSON JEFFERS.

FIRST EDITIONS OF JEFFERS

THE exhibition of Jeffersiana at Occidental college from which the poet was graduated in 1905 was arranged in three parts; the first devoted to first editions of Jeffers' published works; the second devoted to books about Jeffers, the third to miscellaneous items.

The poet published his first volume, "Flagons and Apples" in Los Angeles in 1912. It was limited to 500 copies, and is now a rare item. The title is from The Song of Solomon, "Stay me with flagons, comfort me with apples, for I am sick of love."

In 1916, Jeffers published "Californians" in New York. It shows the poet turning from love lyrics to objective narrative-poems of the coastal folk. Like its predecessor, it was ignored by critics and readers.

The first and only edition of Tamar and Other Poems was published in New York in 1924. It marked the end of the poet's obscurity. The author was hailed as a major poet, and some of the descriptive lyrics are regarded as among Jeffers' finest things. In 1925 came Roan Stallion, Tamar, and Other Poems, now in its twelfth edition; the best known of the poet's works.

The Women at Point Sur was published in 1927, most ambitious and most obscure of Jeffers' long narrative poems. In 1928 was issued to members of the Book Club of California a limited edition later reprinted in Cawdor and Other Poems. A pamphlet, "An Artist" was printed in Dallas in 1928, which contains a letter from Havelock Ellis hailing Jeffers as the strongest poet to come out of America in recent times.

Jeffers turned to the Bible for inspiration for Dear Judas and Other Poems, published in 1929. The title-poem is a new interpretation of the drama of the crucifixion.

The first edition of the pamphlet "Stars," Pasadena, 1930, consisted of 80 copies, most of which were destroyed because of typographical errors. The second edition, redesigned, numbered 110 copies, for presentation only.

Rarest and most beautiful of the Jeffers first editions is "Apology for Bad Dreams," published in Paris in 1930. The colophon reads: "Thirty numbered copies printed upon a hand-press by Harry Ward Ritchie, a student under the exciting influence of Francois Louis Schmied" . . . . Schmied is one of the world's greatest living master-printers.

During Jeffers' visit to England and Ireland in 1929, he wrote "Descent to the Dead," published in 1931. The poet's genius loci is transferred from Carmel to County Antrim with such success that Orrick Johns wrote of these poems: "No living Irish poet, not Yeats himself, could have made them more authentic. The Irish weather is in them, the black stones and the gray waters, and the dead that live."

In 1932 appeared Thurso's Landing and other poems. Of the title-poem Jeffers wrote: "It seems to me to be the best thing I have yet written. The scene is a canyon of the coast south of Monterey, widened by an episode into the Arizona desert. The time is perhaps more distinctly near the present than usual in my verses; the persons seem to me to be a little more conscious of the moral implications of what they do."

"Give Your Heart to the Hawks" was published in 1933, as result of which Jeffers has been likened by Henry Seidel Canby to "some morbid Hebrew prophet (who) saw visions of blood and disaster on his mountains, and now that the iron has crushed the soul of so many pleasant illusions, seems perversely to have felt the strength of will, the depth of energy, behind the aimless scurry of American life . . . "

"Return," an unpublished poem, was issued in 250 copies by the Grabhorn Press for the bookshop of Gelber, Lilienthal in San Francisco in 1934. Published in 1935 thus far are the poet's appreciation of George Sterling as included in Number One in a series of Letters of Western Authors published for its members by the Book Club of California; and two new poems in the January Scribner's magazine.

"Redhead" Today Carmel Theatre

This afternoon at four and again at 11 tonight, after the regular picture program, Carmel theatre is showing the internationally celebrated French talking picture, "Redhead," declared by the New York Herald-Tribune to be "the greatest of foreign films." This local showing is a treat of unusual significance, in that a lively response to the management's enterprise in booking this great picture may result in placing Carmel theatre on a par with the Filmarte theatre in Hollywood and the International theatre in San Francisco, with first-rate new European films every fortnight.

"Redhead" is shown with English sub-titles, and everyone can enjoy it thoroughly without a knowledge of French. Splendid direction, superlative acting and delightful music mark the picture, which has been everywhere regarded as another milestone in the development of the cinema. In answer to many inquiries, it may be stated that it is a sincere and thrilling story of boyhood, without political or economic allusions of any kind.

Tickets for both the afternoon and night showings are available at the door.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

PROVOCATIVE and controversial, like most of Martin Flavin's plays, is the new "Achilles Had a Heel," which the Pasadena Community Players premiered last week, according to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dougherty, who returned Tuesday night after attending the opening in the south. Walter Hampden, the guest star, played the part of a colored elephant keeper in a park zoo. The play concerns the bitter feud between the elephant's attendant and the white keeper of the monkey house, and the action all takes place in the vicinity of the cages. Various other characters are brought in, both to enact small dramas in their own lives, and to contribute to the plot; the antagonism between the two keepers. The white man had been a captain during the war, and has a guilty secret, in keeping with his essentially contemptible nature, which the black man knows.

The play's climax comes with the elephant, whom his keeper worships, near death from poison. The keeper, not a praying man, tried to pray for him, and drifts into a primitive chant which makes an intensely dramatic scene, in which Hampden rose to heights.

The action is in ten episodes, and while wondering what it was all about, for it is essentially symbolic, the audience was gripped by the high dramatic tension.

JOHN PATRICK, the young radio star and playwright, who has been living in Carmel for several months, is leaving Sunday for New York, taking with him the manuscript of "Hell Freezes Over," on which he has been working since staging his original "Glory Lane" a couple of months ago. "Hell Freezes Over" was considered for Carmel production, but now that it is finished it looks so good that Patrick is going to try for Broadway presentation.

With Johnny Cermyer, Patrick has been keeping bachelor hall in his cottage here, watched over by Esther, the motherly colored cook who has become an "instituttion" to the boys and their friends. Esther gave a birthday party for Patrick Monday, and outdid herself in spreading a feast for the two Johns, Helen Troy, the Sally to Patrick's Cecil on the radio, her husband, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sparks.

Clean-up Time, So Get Active

Clean-up time is a very serious time this year! Not only has the activity been extended to cover rebuilding, remodelling, painting, gardening, and, in short . . . everything which may be classed as improvement to the home and premises, but personal solicitation is again inaugurated to enforce the removal of fire hazards and unreasonable unsightliness.

The campaign is peninsula-wide. Presenting suggestions and aggressively pushing the campaign, in addition to the mayor and other "official voices," M. J. Murphy, Inc., Bonham's Inc., the G. A. Good Lumber Company, the Hayward Lumber Company, the Pine View Nursery, the Work Lumber Company, are actively pushing forward the campaign in Carmel.

fact-finding committee). "I am the attorney for the three cities in the rate case and I want to see that report!"

Councilman Catlin said that the engineer, hired by the fact-finding committee, was required to make his report directly to them, and that a request for the report should be made to the committee and not to the engineer. Council Rowntree said that he was sure that Mr. Howard would report to the council if requested to do so. He was instructed to see Mr. Howard about the report. The warrant paying the engineer was allowed, but was ordered held up until the report was in the hands of the council. Thoburn and Catlin voted against holding up the warrant.

Special Meeting

Street Commissioner Burge told the council that he had investigated various makes of street graders, and wished to recommend to the city the purchase of an Austin Western Road Machinery Company combined grader and scarifier, to cost $4,064.50. The council agreed that new street equipment is needed; but were not sure that city finances could meet the expenditure at this time. The matter was referred to the finance committee, including Thoburn, Rowntree and Burge, to report back at a special meeting next Wednesday night. Rowntree expressed doubt whether he could complete an investigation into the matter in a week's time.

On a motion by Councilman Rowntree the council asked that the police judge file a monthly report.

The council voted to install stop-signs at the corners of Eighth and San Carlos and Dolores and Twelfth, and to make a yellow no-parking zone before Seven Arts Court, where the tree in the middle of the street makes a traffic hazard.

The 24 volumes of current literature bought this year by the Woman's club book section were auctioned to members Wednesday morning at the final meeting. This collection, together with a number loaned by members, made a total of 42 volumes which have circulated within the group.

Youthful Salesman Offers Fish Worms for Isaac Waltons

An enterprising young merchant is Ronald Dorsett, son of the parson, whose latest venture into high finance takes the form of offering fish worms for sale. Not just any kind of worms, but nice juicy contented angle-worms, personally selected and guaranteed to appeal to hungry trout. Up to the opening day he hadn't done much business, just one customer in fact—maybe his father, he didn't say—but he expected his signs to lure in more trade after more local fishermen really get the urge.

Selling fish worms may be a unique venture in these parts, but over in the Owens Valley, where the inhabitants are very fish and tourist conscious, it is a standard industry. During the summer every tree and fence-post sprouts a sign, "Fish worms for sale."

At the Carmel library Miss Elizabeth Niles has installed a seaman's chest to receive contributions from local readers. The response from Carmel has always been good, she says. The books will be collected here next week as well as this, in order that patrons, seeing the reminder this week, may have additional time to ransack the family library for volumes the household can spare.

From here the books will be sent to San Francisco, thence to men of the American Merchant Marine, the coast guard, lighthouse and lightship keepers, who by nature of their professison have no access to public libraries. Books of all sorts are welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Alger Fast had as a week-end guest Miss Virginia Loveland of Berkeley.

Sunset Carnival Spirit Prevails

Big event in Carmel today is the spring carnival at Sunset school, preparations for which have kept P-T. A. members in a high fever for several weeks. All is in readiness now, including 500 hot dogs with which visitors may refresh themselves while visiting the various concessions and sideshows.

No efforts have been spared in securing attractions worthy of the big spring jubilee. Where the Chicago fair failed, Carmel has succeeded, for it is rumored that the "Dionne quintuplets" will be among the side-show features. A man half white, half black, a creature half woman and half man, a three-footed man and other freaks may be seen. A magician will perform, and a special attraction is being kept as a surprise.

The first grade is prepared to put on a circus; several films of Sunset pupils and teachers will be shown; a Hill Billies troupe of musicians will put on specialty numbers, including a Virginia Reel in costume; dancing numbers have been rehearsed by June Delight Canoles and Miss Althea Kendall.

The festivities will open at 2 o'clock with a doll-buggy parade. Hal Bragg, as chief announcer, will broadcast the arrival of celebrities through a loud-speaker system. In addition to the side-shows there will be concessions, including a fish pond, several ponies for children to ride, a flower booth, candy booth, balloon and hot-dog stands. A particular attraction will be the food stall where cookies, cakes, pies, beans, spaghetti meat loaf, devilled eggs and similar delicacies will be offered, to solve the problem of the evening meal for those who linger on the grounds until closing time.

Gunnar Johansen Recital Tomorrow

Gunnar Johansen, Danish pianist, will be heard in piano recital tomorrow evening in the Denny-Watrous Gallery. at 8:30 o'clock. That Mr. Johansen is a pianist of the first rank, with such a prodigious technique as very few ever achieve, is generally acknowledged. His coming piano recitals, as announced by the Denny-Watrous Gallery, offer a veritable musical feast, with programs of varying interest and musical significance played with the fire, the temperament, color and dazzling abandon of power that is synonymous with the name of Gunnar Johansen.

Tomorrow night's program opens with the rarely heard "Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Bach" of Reger; the lovely Mozart Sonata in C Major follows; then Beethoven's "Rondo a capriccio," (Rage over a lost penny); a "Moment Musical" and "Impromptu" by Schubert; and last a group by Scriabin, of which the "Fifth Sonata" is the climax.

The Russian musical critic, L. Jacovleff, has written as follows about Johansen's performance of the great work: "In his rendition of the fifth sonata Johansen revealed himself as an artist of the first magnitude . . . As I was listening to Johansen's playing, my mind wandered back to the by-gone days, when, more than 20 years ago in Moscow, Scriabin held his audiences spellbound creating an unearthly atmosphere of musical ecstasy. Now again, when the firth sonata was played by Johansen, I felt the radiance, the mysticism and the exaltation of Scriabin's music, and the performance of the young pianist produced an unforgettable impression.

Mrs. G. Rollins, Mrs. N. Coffin and W. A. Delahyde, all of Des Moines, Iowa, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Phillips of Paris, stopped at Hotel La Ribera en route east after a motor trip through California.

Abalone League Into Thunderous Finale Sunday; Some Batting Dope

By CHARLES VAN RIPER

ACCENT on youth is the new note in the 1935 overture of Carmel's Abalone League which next Sunday reaches its thunderous finale. Young stars are in the seats of the mighty with chaplets of laurel and bay resting rakishly above their classic brows.

Bill Staniford and Galen Alderson are carrying the torch in the race for batting honors in Sunday afternoon baseball circles. The Pilot outfielder has a flaming average of .860, and his Shamrock rival sparkles at .816.

Country-Fashion

These averages are arrived at country-fashion by figuring the percentage of plays on which the batsman "reached base" against the total number of times at bat. Bases on balls and sacrifice hits are not excluded from official times-at-bat as in other systems. Moreover, not only hits, but also free passes, fielder's choice plays, and base on errors are added indiscriminately into the "reached base" total. This runs the averages into the higher brackets, but the record of comparative results runs true. And records to date show the above-mentioned pair of modern, stream-lined Abalone leaguers fighting for the batting championship.

Two Good Batters

Bill and Galen, although benefiting by any break which embarked them on the bases, have both whaled away at the ball with conspicuous solidity. Bill is a free-swinging batter who hits for distance, and Galen delivers a straight-away wallop that laces the ball through sectors that rival infielders can't cover.

A real veteran of the Monterey peninsula baseball wars is at present in the third spot in the league slugging list. Bernie McMenamin who played on Monterey's first official town team is careening dizzily along just back of the leader and runner-up. But thereupon the oldsters collapse completely, while Catlett, Marble, et al, come into their own.

Dick Catlett, Tiger third-baseman, is tops among the right-handed hitters of the league. This intrepid young man in the course of the season has collected a wild cargo of bristling base-hits and in five instances has been able to bring-'em-back-alive as full-grown, man-eating home-runs. Stu Marble has come along faster than any other player in the league, is fielding well, bombarding the ball sharply, and contributes to heads-up team play. A pair of young centerfielders, Hap Hasty and Martin Leidig, are swinging right along with the new group now making the pace in the Abalone League.

All of these rising stars of the soft-ball game are appearing exclusively in the Sunday afternoon sessions in Carmel Woods. Comparison of their records with those of other Abalone players who are doubling-in-brass for night ball in the leagues over the hill and in the Grove indicates that Carmel is continuing to develop top-notchers for the baseball specialty it began back in the antiquity of 16 years ago.

Re-inforcements

On the heels of the flying squadron which has already established its Abalone League leadership, another line of re-inforcements is sweeping forward. The Knickerbockers, organized and manned by Carmel boys enrolled in Monterey High School, have demonstrated abundant ability to uphold the baseball tradition. Captain Bardarson of the Abalone League's Giants carries his leadership to the school that is in his charge. Waterloos are being won on the playing fields of Sunset.

Averages to date of the four front-runners in the Abalone batting race are:

| | AB | R | RB | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Staniford (P) | 29 | 14 | 25 | .860 |
| G. Alderson (S) | 32 | 15 | 26 | .816 |
| McMenamin (S) | 24 | 14 | 19 | .719 |
| Catlett (T) | 24 | 9 | 18 | .750 |

Annual Drive on Fire Hazards in Carmel Ushers In Clean-up Week

CARMEL'S participation in National Clean-up Week will largely take the form of fire-prevention, according to Mayor Jim Thoburn and Fire Chief Bob Leidig, who are now perfecting plans for their annual drive on fire hazards. Because of late rains, dry grass and brush have not yet become a menace, so it will probably not be until the last week in May that citizens will be asked to cooperate in eliminating these hazards.

Steps will probably be taken to make an SERA project of the annual clean-up, according to Mayor Thoburn. The plan is that householders will be asked, on a certain designated day, to carry all inflammable trash to the property line, whence SERA workers and city trucks will remove it.

Chief Leidig points out that if every fire hazard in every home and every place of business in the country were to take fire tonight, the fire departments of the nation would be helpless, cities would be reduced to heaps of smoking ashes and millions of men, women and children would die at the same time.

"Fire hazards are funny things," said the chief, "Sometimes they are present for years and never cause a fire. Other times fires break out from a hazard that is years old, and again, the fire hazard does its dirty work almost immediately."

Faulty chimneys, poor electric wiring, carelessness with matches and electric heating units, lighted cigarets, oily rags, cleaning with gasoline and benzine, rubbish in basements and attics, are among the dangers which Chief Leidig warns against. If citizens can't recognize fire hazards, the fire department is anxious and willing to point them out. Members of the fire department will canvass the village before long, to offer suggestions and point out the need for caution with inflammable materials.

Carmel Pistol Club To Meet on Tuesday

Carmel Pistol Club will hold its regular monthly business meeting next Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the club room in the Williams building, according to Charlie Guth, who is sending out the announcement. At this time medals will be passed out to the team members who contributed to the club's good standing in the recent national matches.

Possibility of competitive matches with other clubs of Central California will be discussed, and plans will be made for the outdoor season, which will begin soon at the range in Hatton Fields. A lunch will be served after the business meeting.

EASTERN WOMAN PRESENTS NEW FACIAL TREATMENT

Mrs. Henry Lund of New York City has arrived here from the east and has made arrangements for the introduction of Mme. Gerbaulet's method of facial treatment in the Hotel Del Monte's Beauty Shop.

Though Mme. Gerbaulet has a discerning clientele in New York, this will be the first time the treatment has been available on the Pacific coast. Nor are her products to be found in any other shop on the peninsula.

This Vale of Tears

By PHIL NESBITT

ONCE I thought I could write a poem. This was because I was in Carmel. It started with the phrase "The Isles of Tasman." After that, I thought of something about "sea turtles in the far-off Antipodes," then, "salamanders in the China Sea." That's as far as I got with the poem. So I want away from Carmel.

Remember Sherwood Anderson's "Winesburg, Ohio?" Dealt with the introvert tales of the citizens of a small mid-western town. Then there is "Spoon River Anthology." Both are suggestive of a fertile subject matter pertinent to Carmel. Carmel produces more pungent and pleasantly morbid conditions among men and women than most other towns. Why doesn't some one write them?

Living quietly in Carmel are two truly fine and well-renowned architects. Perhaps they should be first consulted about what shall be done about Carmel beach (a fine piece of natural architecture) instead of the more politically-minded fellows passing for architects. One of the famed two knows so well how to build with rock.

Peninsula Riders In Russian Film

All dressed up as cossacks and other Russian regimental heroes, a number of peninsula hard-riders have participated in the steeplechase sequences made by M.G.M. this week at the old Del Monte race track. As nearly as the boys could make out, they were assisting in the filming of a "grudge race" in "Anna Karenina," though no one remembers just where it occurs in the Tolstoy novel. If they do not become mere faces on the cutting room floor, audiences will see our Dave Davis, as a military aide, Bobby Smith as a male nurse, Spec Watson as a cossack—incidentally, he sprained his ankle in a nasty spill—Pete O'Crotty as another cossack, and his casualty was a torn ligament in his arm; Col. Jodovskoi as a gallant captain.

Dewey Clough was eliminated, as were a number of the others, from the more dangerous jumping scenes. He could have been a soldier-extra, but M.G.M. couldn't find any soldiers' boots big enough for him. Mary Hayne and Matilda Andrews were all dressed up in cossack uniforms, but had not been called into action up to press-time.

Bill Radcliff, clad as a colonel, was to be the starter for the race. Micha Ulman, the 'heavy' is the only one of the principals who has participated in the local sequences. Buddy Roosevelt, doubling for Frederic March, was in some of the scenes shot this week.

Lynn Hodges and Dick Collins acted in a sort of advisory capacity, and two of Collins helpers, known as "Joey" and "Slim" did some of the most brilliant riding, jumping and spills.

Thoburns Move Offices Into Larger Quarters

Mr. and Mrs. James Thoburn and Mr. and Mrs. P. A. McCreery have moved this week into their roomy new quarters, the former Carmel Land company quarters on Ocean. The large front office and two smaller private offices at the rear give much more scope for their activities, as well as much more space for their friends to loaf. The small court at the side of the building, which Bernard Rowntree bedecked with grizzly trophies like the skull of a steer and a ram's head, several years ago, the Thoburns are thinking of turning into a lemonade bar, as a further inducement to their friends to stick around. They are keeping the old Thoburn real estate office at the corner of Ocean and Dolores open as a branch of the main establishment.

Streams High as Fishing Begins

The trout season opened in California Wednesday, with the exception of Districts 2½, 23 and 25. In general, owing to the heavy rainfall during the past few months, the outlook for good fishing is not promising at present. Bait and spinner lures will be the rule, rather than the exception. In the foothills, side-roads are rough, and above elevations of 3000 feet practically impassable on account of mud and in some places snow.

Streams are very high in Monterey county. Bait fishing will give results in Lower Carmel and Big and Little Sur. Coast has road blocked by slide at Hurricane Point, but may be clear this week-end.

Fishing should be fairly good in Santa Cruz county this week as the water is clearing rapidly. Numerous fish are to be seen in Aptos creek. San Lorenzo river is excellent for spinner fishing.

In San Luis Obispo county streams are running high but clear. Fishing should be better than for several years past.

In Santa Clara county, Isabell and Smith creeks have lots of fish, but water is high. Bait fishing should give fair results.

Trout Are Biting But Streams High

Rain Delays Many; Others Are Brave

By MONTE CARMELO

"That's what I call rubbing it in," Ernest Reeder began. "Here I am all set to go and it had to rain and a lot of other things happened, too."

"Meaning," said Bernard Rowntree, looking up from his books in the Pine Cone office, "meaning of course you didn't go trout fishing on opening day."

"You guessed it," said Ernie with a sigh. "You see, I was busy getting these youngsters started. There was Walter Tuttle and Charley May and Bud Crossman and William E. Mack and some more of them who just couldn't wait no matter how high the streams are. Bill Mack just sneaked off by himself and went up the Little Sur. Mel Dorsett couldn't make it Wednesday because he had a speech to make, but he got away Thursday for Cachagua and the country thereabouts. Frank Murphy, Al Sparks and Heinie Willy went to Big Creek, and the reports are not yet in.

"Then there were George Cook, Carlyle Lewis, Raleigh Belvail, Tommy Harbolt, Joe De Amaral, Teabee Nichols and Ashley (No) Justice who just couldn't wait another day.

"We were planning on getting away this week-end for up above San Clemente, but what with Doc Staniford having a sale and Jim Cockburn being a grandpa and Ranny passing out cigars over the 'blessed event," it looks like the old trout will have to wait a few days.

"But what burns me up is getting a batch of high falooting liatoor brass-banding Mineral King and that high Sierra country from my old friend, Tom Phipps."

"Most thoughtful, if you ask me," Rowntree commemnted. "Just shows that Tom was thinking about you."

"Nothing of the sort," Ernie declared. "That broncho buster just naturally knows that I'm dying by inches for a chance to drag some of those big trout from Moraine lake. He figured that he'd cut me blood raw with these new fangled folders.

"Every year when spring comes along Tom sends me a dose of this poison. Oh, he'll pretend that he didn't intend to agitate me; then he'll go out behind a tree and laugh himself sick.

"Now sir, seriously speaking, do you realize that, in its own hypnotic way, the trout game measures the development and progress of this beautiful state. Fact, wait till I fill my pipe and I'll show you.

"I can remember a few odd years back when only a few regulars like Sam Morse and the late Frank Devendorf paid any attention to trout fishing. Sam was telling me how he used to think it wonderful to take a team of horses and drive up one of the streams and come back with the limit.

"Today the number of anglers' licenses sold rolls away into the thousands. More good men and women will take their autos and trek into the mountains within the next few weeks than went to the Abalone League baseball games all season.

"And it's easy to understand. I claim that the old world don't produce a thrill equal to feeling the quick snap on your line, the bend of the slim bamboo tip and the sight of that live fish of silver and gold flapping on the green grass by the side of the tattling stream.

"Try to tell me that any human being can whip a trout stream with glad sunlight, an' beckoning fingers of the fir trees, and blue skies and the pure air of the Creator all 'round; tell me a man or woman can live in this atmosphere for one hour and not be bettered by it. N-o, s-i-r!

"That's partly why trout fishing has become so popular. It goes right to the center of a man's heart and brings out all that is good in him. A day in the stillness of the mountains makes youth see dreams of the future to come, and old age look backwards, losing the weight of years with one whisper from the angel of the waters."

TWENTY-FOUR HOUR ICE SERVICE FOR CARMEL

Announcement was made this week of the opening of a "serve yourself" ice station for Carmel. The Monterey Ice Company has installed one of its modern stations at the corner of Sixth and Mission. Plenty of clear sparkling ice will be on hand 24 hours a day, according to E. W. Powell, manager for the company.

Children Assist River In Travels to Sea

Paddling in the water behind the sandbar at the mouth of Carmel river the other day, a group of urchins undertook the engineering project of cutting the bar through. They had only sticks to work with, and didn't really think they could do it—were just fooling around. But the river took things into its own hands, and enlarged on their tentative scratchings to such good effect that it burst through to the sea. In the process one of the youngsters saw something glittering in sand thrown up by the stream. He thought it might be treasure, and fished it out. The trophy had no value to him, but may have to someone else. It was a bunch of keys, and if anyone remembers losing a bunch of keys while strolling near the river mouth, he might drop in at the Pine Cone office and see if these are the ones.

Modern Gas Ranges Show New Devices To Save Labor In Homes

Giant Water-Spout Viewed By Residents Along Scenic Drive

Carmelites whose homes have an ocean view were treated—if they happened to be looking out of their windows about 4:45 Monday evening—to the extremely rare sight of a giant water-spout. Mrs. H. G. Mueth, who saw the phenomenon from a top window of La Playa hotel, was reported as its "discoverer." It was described as resembling a desert "dust devil" in action. Dave Prince looked up water spouts in the encyclopedia, and says they are a sort of cyclone; a snaky column of water connecting the cloudy heavens with turbulent ocean. The spout appeared to rise opposite Point Lobos and traveled rapidly to a spot approximately opposite the Robinson Jeffers home on Carmel Point, where it suddenly dispersed. The encyclopedia says they are seldom more than 200 feet high; Mr. Prince thought this one was higher. They are usually seen in tropical waters.

MANY LEND SUPPORT

Leading building firms, hardware dealers, florists, etc., are lending support to the clean-up campaign on the peninsula.

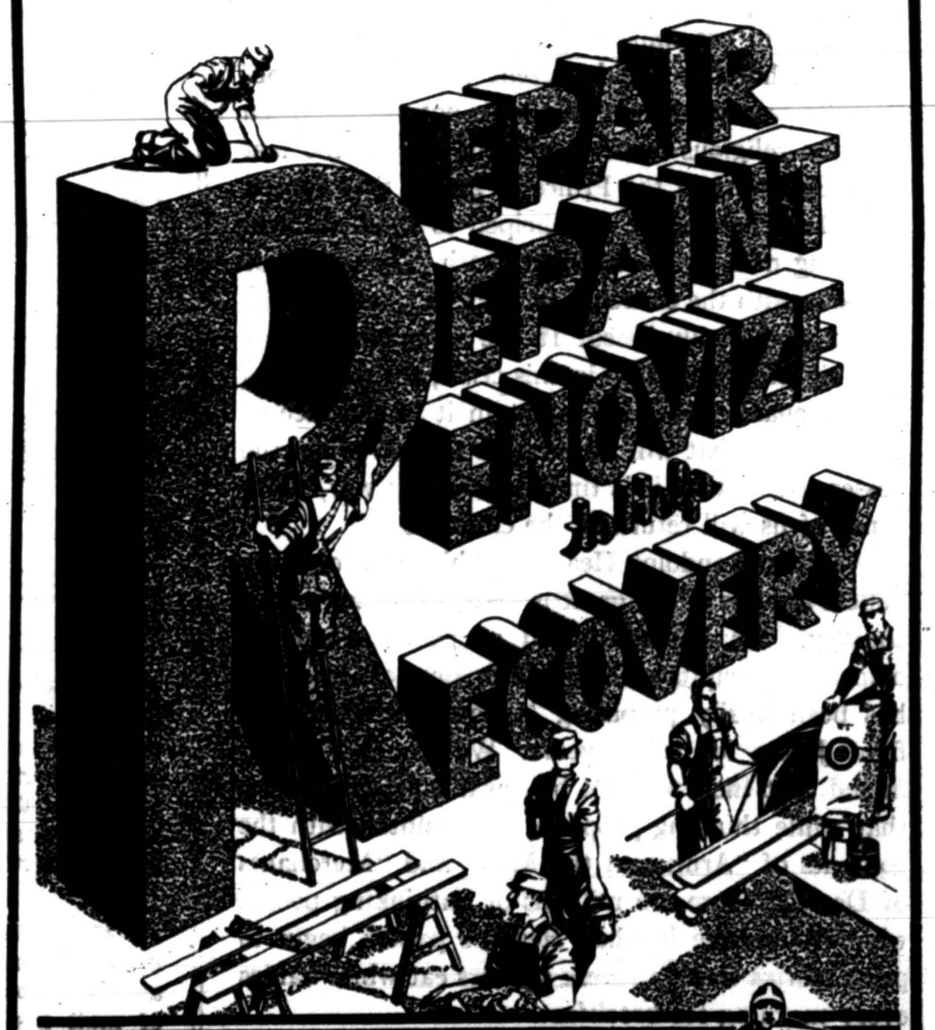

So revolutionary are the improvements made on gas ranges within the past five years, that the woman who wants the maximum kitchen efficiency, will do well to investigate the new models now on display, points out the Gas Appliance Society, which is announcing Saturday, April 27, as the opening of "Gas Range Week."

New conveniences, new beauty and new scientific construction have made cooking easier, better and more economical. Baking has been taken out of the age of guesswork and has been made simple and certain.

The modern housekeeper has replaced hours of back-breaking labor with intelligent planning. Now, with the minimum of effort she is able to guide the preparation of meals which modern equipment always prepares successfully.

New gas ranges, now on display at the dealers, are being acclaimed the most beautiful of all household appliances with their modern designs, streamline effects and round corners, gleaming porcelain enamel exteriors, and other eye-appealing features.

Women who pride themselves on their efficient and economical home management, and on the appetizing quality of the meals they serve, welcome many labor-saving improvements which mean a smaller expenditure in time and energy, as well as better results.

WAR AND PEACE

In the face of world-wide war scares of increasing grimness, one hopeful sign insinuates itself into the midst of talk and writing of the "inevitability" of war. It is the realistic understanding of many people that the munitions makers are in the business of making war for profit. Such writings as the sensational article in Fortune, about a year ago, "Arms and the Men," and the book, "Merchants of Death," have placed in the hands of a great many people information which was possessed only by experts and statesmen before the world was plunged into the last great war. War has been pretty well debunked of adventure and glamour. A good many of the young men of soldiering age have a cynical attitude, such as the world has never seen before, about fighting the battles of the bankers and the arms makers.

In the hearts of many women is a grim determination that there shall be no more war. Through their organizations and their emergence into business and professional fields since 1914 women have become articulate and influential. In woman's clubs, leagues of women voters, church organizations, P-T. A.s, the tense international situation and the realization that wars are made for profit, not for ideals, are topics of pre-eminent interest.

The churches could present a formidable obstacle to war sentiment. We have not yet forgotten that the religious leaders sold out during the last war. Followers of the Prince of Peace, they ranted with the other jingos, and helped to send millions of young men out to horrible death. Thousands of us broke with the churches for this very reason, disgusted and disillusioned. If the churches resume their rightful leadership in this crisis, set their faces sternly against war and maintain it in the face of the pressure that will be brought to bear when the bosses decide that it is time for another war, thousands of us will return to the churches.

William Randolph Hearst and his chain of slimy papers are one of the great menaces to peace in this country. Mr. Hearst tasted of power when he helped to precipitate the Spanish-American war. He has been busily preparing his gullible readers to fight Japan for many years. We who are determined that there will not be a war must remember, that while thinking people are acquainted with the contents of "Arms and the Men" and "Merchants of Death," there are millions of unthinking people who will believe it when Hearst's papers begin to print stories that Japanese soldiers eat white babies every morning for breakfast.

Mr. Hearst's far-flung financial interests would be vastly benefited by a "real good war." War hysteria would tend to distract the people's attention from the inequalities in the economic system under which Mr. Hearst and his friends amass greater and greater wealth. Mr. Hearst, if he does not aspire to be the dictator himself—which is not beyond possibility—undoubtedly aspires to be the power behind the dictator who would seize control under cover of war-time necessity. Mr. Hearst's legitimate political aspirations have been repeatedly thwarted. He has the mania for power which besets most possessors of great wealth.

The pattern which traitors to their country have mapped out is clear. War with Japan—any inciting incident will do, such as the blowing up of a battleship in a Japanese harbor, for there is no real reason for a war—spontaneous uprising of the elements opposed to a senseless war, imposition of a fascist dictatorhip to "quell communism" in a time of national emergency. It may rest with the women, the students and the churches to prevent this tragedy. Will they be strong enough?

Here's Looking at You

By LOIS COLLINS PALMER

DURING the past few months Carmel has suffered severely from a rash of petitions. The right of the people to make its wants known to its representatives has not only been abused, it has been carried to ridiculous extremes, and as a measure of informing the council of the "will of the people" it has fallen into disrepute. So much so that many Carmelites, and among them this scribe, have made it a rule to sign no petitions whatsoever.

* * *

Nationally, the same facility with which people squiggle their names to any and all documents thrust under their noses has created a serious situation. Legislators are swamped under a deluge of mail instructing them how to vote on everything from the Townsend plan to the color of pansies to be planted on the White House lawn. Presumably the peepul know that they have elected feeble-minded representatives who need constant instructions and admonitions from home.

* * *

A good petition-circulator is required to be something of a spell-binder. He makes a few passes over his goggle-eyed victim, mouths a rapid sales talk, and finishes, "sign here!" The sovereign voter signs, usually without reading the preamble to see if he is actually expressing the political sentiments he things he is. Later he finds out what he has done and then howls that he "didn't know that was what he was signing." This proclivity of those who can write, but not read, to welsh on the statement they have signed robs petitions of a good deal of their political effectiveness. Though one would think that if any worthy voter were fool enough to sign a petition without reading it he would be ashamed to admit it afterwards.

* * *

Our worthy law-makers are inclined to give serious heed to petitions, letters, telegrams, if they are in accord with their own views. If they are not, they end inglorious in the ash-can. Carmel was amused when Mayor Thoburn professed himself to be "very much impressed" by 200-odd names signed to a petition against rezoning the lot on which the Woman's club wished to build, while a petition with some 300 signatures, asking that Bernard Rowntree be appointed commissioner of fire and police was regarded as "not sufficiently representative," was buried and has not been heard of since.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Like ex-President Hoover, we devote a good deal of attention to the editorial pages of newspapers, particularly the smaller newspapers, as represented by our weekly exchanges. The editorial sentiments of the weeklies and small dailies are less stodgy, more picturesque and personal than those of the great metropolitan papers.

Whether or not there is a "free" press in this country is a moot question. Any newspaper realizes the danger of seriously offending its major advertisers. Retaliation is often sharp, swift, and painful to the cash register. But politically, there is not only liberty of expression, but often license. Probably in no other country in the world is the press allowed to be so outspoken in criticism of the government. The political temper of the state and of the nation is well-reflected in the pungent comment of our contemporaries.

Governor Merriam, whose election last fall "saved" the state from Sinclairism, is now freely referred to as "incompetent" and "bungling." One editor calls him too radical; his measures are described as working a hardship on the state's constructive interests. Another flays him for hardshell conservatism.

Dissatisfaction with national government is equally outspoken, if equally lacking in unanimity. It is apparent that Roosevelt's personal popularity is still his chief asset, but our editorial contemporaries are wondering if he is out of ideas. Some of them hope so, others fear an impasse. But cabinet members and other high government officials are not spared editorial tongue-lashings.

It is interesting to speculate on what would happen to a newspaper editor in Russia or Germany or Italy who ventured to indulge in the outspoken criticism of government which is so prevalent in this country; where, if it is not possible for a cat to look at a king, a country newspaper editor may frown at his rulers.

BRINGING IN THE DOLLARS

Perhaps it is a far cry from war and Federal appropriations to talk of spring and the urge to be on the move that it brings upon most of us. But travel, and the tourist season, can mean to California just about as much, in the way of money income, as large slices of government spending.

What with the international exposition in San Diego this year plus the ever present attractions this state holds for the visitor, some millions of people are expected to drop in on us and leave a few dollars. Carmel is bound to get its share of these sheckels.

One potent factor in California's favor is the present devalued condition of the American dollar, which discourages travel abroad these days. The yen to be sophisticated in foreign capitals is giving way to the more practical matter of counting the cost. And why not? There is quite enough to be seen in this country to keep the gypsying American busy and the average person can go oh-ing and ah-ing along our Carmel coast-line for a good many summers on end.

Canal Zone Visitors Here On Western Tour

On a leisurely tour of the west, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Russell of the Canal Zone stopped at Hotel La Ribera this week for their first view of Carmel. They have heard of the village from time to time, and in the course of a fascinating game of looking up new places, they came to investigate. One purpose of their trip—besides using up three and a half months of accumulated leave on Mr. Russell's job with the Canal Zone postal service—is to scout for possible places to live, for in a few years more Mr. Russell will be retired. He has seen 27 years' service in the zone, saw the opening of the big cut and much of the work on it. Before going into government service, he was a newspaper man.

LADIES WANTED

There are 33 vacancies at Camp California, former rustic military academy and a beauty spot on Monterey Bay, which SERA converted into a camp to help unattached women between 21 and 45 years of age. The camp holds 40.

CLUB MEETS HERE

The Muricata club of Monterey held its annual spring luncheon at Normandy Inn Wednesday. About 30 members and guests were present.

CARMEL POINTERS COMPLAIN ORDINANCE WORKS HARDSHIP

A meeting of Carmel Point property owners with Reeve Conover, engineer of the county planning commission, will be held next Monday evening at Sunset school. Reason for the session is to consider possible changes in the county zoning ordinance, which has been discovered to work a hardship on owners of some of the irregularly shaped lots left by the curving roads of the Points. On some of the lots, the property owners contend, no sort of building could be erected which would not be in violation of the zoning law.

RADIO STATION MANAGER AT DEL MONTE MICROPHONE

Harrison Holliway, KFRC station manager, will again be at the microphone when Bob Kinney and his Hotel Del Monte orchestra broadcast over KFRC and the Columbia Don Lee network this week-end.

Since they made their radio debut less than two weeks ago, Kinney and his orchestra have become more popular than ever. Each Friday and Saturday night when they go on the air at 9:30 o'clock, the exotic Bali room is filled with a gay throng of dancers.

HERON REARRANGES SHOP

Herbert Heron's response to spring fever is to rearrange completely his book shop in Seven Arts Court. The front shop will be devoted to craft goods, the middle chamber, opening into the court, will be used for books alone, and alterations have transformed the back room into a cozy office.

RETURNS FROM SANTA CRUZ

Mrs. Ted Sierka, better known as Sammy Sampson of the Blue Bird tea room, has returned from Santa Cruz where she has been staying for several weeks, to join her mother, Mrs. Mabel Sampson.

Kid Party Held at Pacific Grove

One of the most auspicious events of the year took place at the gym of the Pacific Grove High School, Wednesday afternoon in the form of a "kid party." With girl members of the senior class as guests of honor, their sisters of the remaining classes, made this occasion memorable. Miss Dorothy Orchard, sophomore, was resplendent in a rather "short" dotted Swiss frock, with red accessories. Ruth Fogg, senior class, and editor of this year's Sea Urchin, was attired in a blue pleated skirt over which was a yellow cambric "tunic-blouse" caught around the equator with a green silk sash.

Elizabeth de Lorimier, student body president, was striking in a red and white gown which terminated at the knees and was further enhanced by gloriously frilled pantaloons which hung coyly four inches below her gown.

Vega Swift, instructor in English, was arrayed in a blue and white striped frock of uncertain length. Virginia Schmitt was a lovely symphony in yellow. Mary Ann Leininger portrayed a daring note in exquisite blue rompers garnished with white net. Jane Gartshore and Rosemary Harshberger presented an attractive picture dressed red and white and blue and white checked gingham, respectively. Barbara Ansell showed the rapidly growing masculine influence in feminine apparel in severely cut navy blue trousers with a tailored white shirt, sans shoes or stockings. Barbara Ingham, president of the Girls' League, was in a pink organdie and pink and blue bow. Elsie Bisnett exhibited a color scheme of changeable taffeta of purple and pink, and blue stockings.

A skit entitled "The Little White Schoolhouse," was presented, after which a championship badminton match was played by Louise Cowen and Clara Callendar with Miss Callender as victor. Hoshi Iwakirie was general chairman.

Older Boys Lose to Monterey Team

Sunset's older boys' baseball team lost its lead position in the peninsula elementary school league as result of the game played last Friday with Monterey. Wind, dust and a strange field threw the local boys off their stride during the early innings, and at the close of the fourth, Monterey was leading, 8-0. Pulling themselves together in the fifth, the Sunset team ran up eight runs, tying the score. Then came two more runs for Monterey in the sixth, giving a lead which Sunset was not able to overcome. Two more runs for each side made the final score 12-10, in Monterey's favor. Errors on Carmel's part contributed to loss of the game.

Sunset, Monterey and Bay View are now tied for first place, each team having lost two games of the six played. Yesterday afternoon's game was played with Pacific Grove, on the Sunset diamond. The Carmel team has made an unexpectedly good showing, as the material available at the beginning of the season was not considered as good as previous years.

MUSIC MATTERS

By THELMA B. MILLER

IN a season of outstanding attractions at the Denny-Watrous Gallery, last Saturday evening's concert by Marie Montana was possibly the finest of the lot. It was given, unfortunately before one of the smallest houses of the season. Here is a young American singer over whom hovers the mantle of authentic greatness. That she is not ranked in the top-flight of today's artists is more a lack of lucky incident than of any readiness on her part. She has temperament, she has depth, and above all she has a beautiful, golden voice with a peculiarly varied tonal quality. At times her notes are clear and effortless as those of a bird; again her singing suggests "the horns of elfland, faintly blowing." Her range is wide, and her tones are sweet at all registers. Their color changes, however, with the mood of her song.

Whereas the typical American soprano has a sweet voice, without much character, Marie Montana has that something more, which American concert goers have mostly associated with the great Italian and German singers.

Her program was distinguished. There was not a trite thing offered, and many were unfamiliar. Her smooth and flexible voice was as fine in the dramatically magnificent Sommi Dei of Handel as in the last muted tone of the lovely Italian lullaby which was one of her encores. The audience was markedly responsive; absolutely quiet during the songs and often for a moment afterwards; lusty and appreciative applause brought the singer back again and again, and for as many encores as she would grant.

The fine accompaniment of Margherita Van Loben Sels was a not inconsiderable feature of the program. Over the wide gamut of expresssion indicated by the singer she followed with responsive sympathy, her obvious virtuosity subdued to the requirement of sustaining and amplifying the singer's intentions.

* * *

THE secohd concert of Edward Kuster's Golden Bough series was given last Friday afternoon before a great many empty seats and about 25 people. Presumably a certain period of time will be required for this Friday afternoon venture to popularize itself. Discounting those who have jobs or other obligations which make this an inconvenient hour—and those are only a handful hereabouts—the cultured and leisured of the peninsula may be counted upon, if Mr. Kuster can hold out long enough, to appreciate this pleasant interlude near the end of the week. Music is heard in the Golden Bough at its best. The quiet charm of the place, to say nothing of the excellent acoustics, give these Friday afternoon affairs a cachet all their own.

Ruth Lorrarine Close, playing the harp, and Winifred Quinlan, lyric soprano, were the entertainers last Friday afternoon. The harp is a charming accompaniment to the singing voice, and this seldom-heard combination provided an hour of most agreeable entertainment. Particularly effective was Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song" with the harp weaving its gossamer veil of harmony and the limpid notes of the singer studding it with jewels.

A lovely woman playing a harp is highly satisfying, esthetically. The The eye feasts, as well as the ear. A woman may play a violin beautifully, but the instrument does not fit into her picture as logically as it does into to man's. Such swift and graceful mastery of strings as Miss Close displayed at her golden harp evokes a tangible spell. Her program was well selected and arranged. Her last group was particularly interesting, consisting of two "atmospheric" numbers by Tournier, and two by Debussy. "The Girl with the Flaxen Hair" lost nothing in transcription for the harp and is perhaps even more pensively descriptive than on the piano.

Tina Flade and Cowell Coming

Continuing their undeviating standard of outstanding attractions, the Misses Denny and Watrous present on Saturday evening, May 11, Tina Flade, dancer, and Henry Cowell, composer-pianist.

Tina Flade was, a few years ago in Dresden, the leading dancer of the Mary Wigman dance group. She toured with the group through Europe, danced in solo in Dresden and Berlin, and a little over a year ago was brought to New York by Eva La Gallienne to dance in her theater. Last summer Tina Flade's success as a dancer brought her west and Mills College prevailed upon her to head their dance department for this spring and summer. A tiny, young slip of a girl, Miss Flade embodies the spirit of the modern dance.

Henry Cowell is one of the American geniuses who was "despised and rejected" by his own state until international recognition and widely bestowed honors forced his native heath to realize what a "prophet" it had reared. There are those who love to tell of how they knew Henry when he was selling mushrooms as a wistful lad of six or seven years; of how he, a blue-eyed boy of nine, knocked at the door of a university professor's house with a torn manuscript in his hand and gravely asked to play a piece; history tells how 20 years later he walked gravely out onto the stage of Queen's Hall, London, with a kit of tools in his hand, arranged marbles, hammer, and chisel neatly on a bench beside the piano and proceeded to outrage, amaze, electrify and finally conquer the most conservative audience in England which had come to hiss and ridicule the young American who dared to "play with his elbows" and go inside the piano itself and make the sighing sounds of a Banshee directly on the strings.
